HISTORY

It is widely told that the history of darts began when soldiers challenged each other by throwing their spears into turned over barrel bases and cut up tree trunks. As winter took the game indoors, darts of shorter lengths were used and rules were created and implemented.

The rings in the elm tree trunk turned out to be perfect for keeping scores and so they would continue to be used until the 1920s when it was discovered that Sisal fibers of the Century Plant worked best. In 1896, Brian Gamlin's scoring structure was accepted creating a board comparable to what exists today.

In 1898, a "folded-paper" target was patented by an American and the barrel made up of metal was patented in 1906 by an Englishman.

It was not long before citizens in different countries embraced the sport and international competitions were formed across Europe. As the hobby of throwing outdoor spears at targets turned into a wide scale indoor sport using small darts, the game became regulated. The earliest regulated indoor darts were solid wood sticks about four inches in length with feathers fixed to one end and a metal tip at the other.

The regulation of the throwing or tossing distance also happened at about the same time, however, there are many standards that are used. The throwing distance was indicated or marked by means of three crates placed from one end to another from a certain brewery named "Hockey & Sons" that provided beer to the Southwest part of England. The beer crates were about three feet in length, thus the distance will be nine feet in length from the line to the dartboard. The "Hockey & Sons" crate size was ultimately decreased to two feet, and thus four crates are lined up as indication to mark the distance which is eight feet in length. This eight foot space or distance continued to be the standard but with different board variations came different throwing distances.

By the 1930's, the game of darts and its rules was established into what is recognized and accepted today. The board size, the distance of throwing and the darts size was standardized. All over the world, many people enjoyed playing the simple sport of darts so that teams were organized to play for medals and trophies and professional clubs and associations began.

RULES OF PLAY

How to setup a dart board:

1. Hang or suspend the dartboard on the wall with a wall backing and measure that the board center should be five feet and eight inches from the ground or floor.
2. Mark with a tape the "throwing line", measured 7 feet, 9 and 1/4 inches from the face of the board as required by the "World Darts Federation" for STEEL tip darts and 8 Feet for PLASTIC tip.

* Be certain that tape marking lies flatly and the front rim is the definite line. The tape that marks the throwing line can be stepped upon by the player in such a way that the foot does not pass the tape.

DARTBOARD SETUP

How to start a basic game:

1. Each player is provided with three darts, and the player who will make the first throw is determined by each player throwing a dart at the center. The one who throws closest to the center of the "bull's-eye" goes first. This is called the diddle.

2. After the throwing order has been decided, the person going first will throw all 3 darts consecutively. The desired target will vary depending on what version of game you are playing. For more detailed rules see the "games" section.

Common Rules:

A dart that misses the dartboard entirely is counted as a "throw" and scores zero.

After you have thrown all three darts and counted your score, you can then take out your darts. Alternate turns until all the players have thrown all their darts and a winner is claimed.

There are many different games of darts, having several different rules. The most simple and easy one is the count up game where players decide on a number of throws or rounds and total their scores, the winner having the highest score.

Rules of the most popular games:

Cricket

Cricket 200

Using the numbers 15-20 and Bull, players take turns throwing at these "zones". When 3 darts are scored in a single zone or one dart in a triple zone, it is considered CLOSED. If the opponent(s) do not CLOSE that zone then any further darts in that zone by a player who has closed it will count as points. The first player to CLOSE all zones and be ahead in points wins.

Low Ball Cricket

Same as above except the numbers used are 1-6 and Bull making the math a little simpler. One unique rule in this game is that if a player hits Trip 1, T2 and T3 on the same throw the first time they mark any of these numbers then they automatically win. This is called a Quicket.

'01

501/701

Counting backwards, all darts score points that are subtracted from the starting total. The game is won by either hitting a double if playing double out or any other combination of score left if playing open out rules.

Bermuda (Half It): In this game the first round starts by shooting at the 12 and then each round you shoot at the next highest number. After the 14 you shoot at doubles and after the 17 you shoot at triples. If you do not hit the target with at least one of your three darts, your score is cut in half.

Gotcha:

This game is a race to 301 from 0. Anytime a player ties the score of another player, the player being tied gets their score cut in half.

Custom Games

I have included some games that have been created as training games for those of you that get bored with the more common competitive games.

Last One Standing

Setup: Using a marker board or piece of paper, pick a variation of 9 or 16 targets and write them down like a tic-tac-toe game.

Rules: Each player exchanges throws at the targets. If the first player misses all three, then the second player only has to hit one target to win the game. If both miss, continue throwing until one player hits and the other misses or the targets are hit successfully down to the last remaining target. Any player can hit any amount of targets with their throw but a minimum of ONE target must be hit to continue the game.

Objective: Hit the last remaining target.

Variations: Use Tic-Tac-Toe rules and increase the number of darts that must hit each target. For example, if the target is a triple 20, then do not claim the square until a player hits (4) triple 20's. Play to any number of sets with a friendly wager.

Continuous Count Down

Setup: Using a marker board or piece of paper, start with 301 or 501.

Rules: Basic 501 rules but with the exception that when one player reaches 0 the opponents remaining score is carried over to another round. When a player falls behind by "double the beginning total" ie: 301/602; they are eliminated from the game.

Objective: Be the only player not to fall behind by double the beginning score. This is a good game to wager a couple coins per point.

Variations: Play with any number of players with a friendly entry fee and wager.

DART COMPONENTS

There are too many variations of dart supplies to talk about all of them. There are benefits and problems with all of them. You should check out the profile pages to see what the top pros are using and get feedback from a few.

Plastic TIPS

Voks (Length: 1.125 inches)

Benefits: Spring Backed, Extremely Durable, swappable between steel and plastic tips.

Problems: A break during a match will delay you 1 minute to unscrew the barrel and insert replacement so it is recommended to have a 4th dart handy.

L-Style Tips (variable lengths)

Benefits: Extra durable

Stubs (Length: 3/4 inch)

Benefits: Don't bend or brake often. Bounce outs keep the dart from blocking a target.

Problems: Some grip techniques require a longer tip. These will most frequently bounce out of the board. More people will be annoyed then not with darts bouncing on the ground. The constant bending over to pick them up will quickly give players a sore back as well. Bounce outs also decrease the odds of having a solid grouped wall for a perfect shot. (*See Strategies for more detail on dart placement.)

2BA (Length: 1 inch)

Benefits: Don't bend or brake as often as other comparable brands but they are not as durable as Voks and L-Style.

Problems: Some players are not comfortable with the feel of the ridge.

Barrels Shapes

Standard

Benefits: The average barrel has the same weight in both ends and has no variation in circumference. It simply has variable grip patterns.

Problems: Large hands require a longer shaft in order to achieve the desired grip.

Javelin

Benefits: The longer barrel provides more surface for larger hands. The most accurate throw and release technique benefits from this balanced barrel.

Problems: I have yet to find a mass produced version that is not hollow on the inside so spring coiled steel tip conversions are not sturdy unless the perfect metal is machined to fit in the middle.

Bumble Bee

Benefits: More surface to grip.

Problems: Too small to be accurate and too wide to fit three in a bed consistently. However, during 2013, Phil Taylor used a variation of a Bumble Bee called the Phase 5.

Torpedo

Benefits: Rounded and heavier in the front for those who prefer to flick their wrist and tend to throw lightly with an arched path.

Problems: Very few of the top shooters use this barrel style and even less use an arched lob like throw.

Mosquito

Benefits: Super skinny barrel allows more room for grouping. Problems: The small barrel requires specialty skinny shafts and tips. They are also very light which increases bounce-outs and decreases accuracy. They would need to be machined out of a very heavy precious metal like gold to be comparable to standard barrel types.

Center Groove

Benefits: Those who like to roll the dart off their thumb to create a spinning throw benefit from having an arch in the middle of the barrel.

Problems: This style of barrel will often be unbalanced between the front and back due to the difficulty of getting the groove perfectly centered.

In addition to the shapes, the weight is variable as well. Weight ranges vary from as little as 9 grams to around 26 grams. To decide what weight is most accurate for you, consider your strength in comparison to others. For example, a body builder with arms as big as a tree will want to throw a heavier dart and find them more accurate.

I am 6'2 and 190 pounds and I lift weights regularly so I find that a 22 gram steel tip dart and 18 gram soft tip dart is most accurate for me. My VOKS steel darts are hollow and come with variable weight inserts. I use a 14 gram barrel with knurled rings. Knurling is where close grooves are cut together to prevent a noticeable ridge. I then add a dense 6 gram tungsten insert. On days my arm feels tired I use a 4 gram brass or 2 gram aluminum insert.

The VOKS technology allows you to swap the steel tips for plastic tips. Unfortunately the spring which allows for a cushioned recoil for a steel tip hitting a wire border does not provide the same benefit on a soft tip board. When the plastic tips hit the board, the recoil releases their snug fit on the barrel allowing them to limp at an angle in the board.

This drawback prevents thrower from being able to use a previous thrown dart as a ramp, wall, or clean marker for the next throw. At the top level of competition this technique is the objective for most throws needed for a perfect score. For this reason not very many top plastic throwers use VOKS recoil darts in plastic play. I machined some longer metal inserts to fit firmly in mine and I trim the plastic tips with nail clippers until I get the desired fit I am comfortable with.

I have big hands so I am more accurate with a longer javelin barrel made by Mueller Sporting Goods. The model is called H1 or Hollow One. It is 1/4 inch longer than a standard barrel and the center is hollowed out different amounts depending on the desired weight. The hollow center prevents me from using a spring coiled hammer head steel tip insert so I am currently throwing VOKS for steel boards and H1 for plastic.

Perhaps, by the time you are reading this, VOKS will have a 2 inch barrel with firm plastic tip inserts and our days of interchanging will be over.

Barrel Grips

Ridged

Benefits: Durable, less wear from friction.

Problems: Some knocking when ridges collide with awkward deflections.

Knurled

Benefits: Laser technology grip gives minimum slip with less rates of knocking from ridged barrels.

Problems: These slip less in your grip than ridged.

Rubber

Benefits: Good grip.

Problems: The rubber prevents effective grouping in triple beds and bounce-outs occur more often when one rubber grip snags on another.

How They Work

Inner Dart Barrel and Soft-Tip Points are Hex Shaped for easy removal from the board

Shock-Absorbing feature saves your points
"I have played over 500 games with the same set of Soft-Tip Points"

Change from Soft-Tip Points to Steel-Tip Points in less than 10 seconds

Flights

The flights you use play just as critical of a role in your accuracy as the other components. The larger your flight, the more drag and resistance your dart will have on the way to the target. The old rule that "the path of least resistance is best", comes into play in this example. A larger flight results in more of the target being blocked by your first or second throw and an increase in flight deflection. Your objective is to perfect your throw in order to use the smallest flight possible.

There are many materials and textures but only one is superior. The poly plastic in the L-Style line up is the best to date. It does not tare and when bent, it returns to shape. Eventually they ware down and curve a bit but they last the longest and only cost a couple extra dollars. They also are form fit to 90 degrees and no folding is required. This also prevents the need for adding a protector on the end. The nylon fabric flights are a great alternative but the shapes are limited. I use the smallest L-Style available which is the Bullet style.

Standard Square

A lot of heavy steel dart throwers have trouble perfecting their release and a large flight has to be used until they are able to improve.

Kite, Diamond, Pear

These are great for helping downsize and improve your release and come in Nylon and L-Style. These styles are sized in between standard and bullet.

Bullet & Astra

These are the smallest flights available and allow the most exposed target area possible.

TECHNIQUE

The techniques you begin the game of darts with are very important. Once you start with certain techniques you want to make sure they are the right ones for you. They will be very hard to change once you get used to them.

The techniques are both mental and physical. Your preparation, is a part of the technique. Preparation is the first step to improving your skill. Focus is a key factor of any physical activity.

Mental Techniques

Before you begin the physical techniques you need to make sure your mentality has attained an enlightened state. You need to push all personal worries behind you and place all your focus and concentration on your goal. One way to do this is by using beginner meditation practices. For example, I use a dark, quiet area with pictures of the loved ones in my life on the wall and a spot light on a dart board. Incense, candles, sand, plants, flowers and stones are just a few items I use.

Once you reach a point where you can hear your heart beat and your breath collide with the air around, you should move on to the physical preparations.

The physical preparations completing your technique include breathing, vision, stance, grip, throwing, release and follow through.

Physical Technique

To prepare your focus you should begin your day by getting plenty of sleep.

If you do not get enough sleep you will feel sluggish and suffer a lack of concentration.

You also need to make sure you have a healthy diet to assure your energy is constant. You want to avoid as many dependencies as your will power allows you. They will cause distractions like hunger that would come along from an unbalanced meal. Some people feel that alcohol or caffeinated drinks help them, but actually when used so often you form a dependency on them, leading to distraction. If you stop concentrating on the board and begin thinking about something to drink you lose your focus.

BREATHING

To improve your skill, you will want to consider each of these reminders in the order listed. When you first approach the oche (line) after being mentally prepared you need to remember to keep your thoughts from wondering so your breathing remains calm. Take a deep breathe and step to the line.

VISION

Look at a black section around the outside the board and then move your focus to your target. This will help your eyes dilate and make your target easier to focus on. If the target looks blurry, step back, reset and try again.

STANCE

The stance is most noticeable technique when distinguishing top players from those that do not care to improve to the highest level of the sport. Your goal is to have the least amount of movement in your stance as possible in order to limit the margin of error.

To be the most accurate in your throwing you need to have the throwing side of your body facing the board. Place your throwing side foot parallel to the oche. Don't step and put your body into it. There is less overall movement when standing sideways. You don't need to rotate your shoulder when standing sideways. If you learn early to only throw with your forearm you will increase your accuracy much faster. You don't want to throw your arm like you are throwing a ball.

GRIP

The grip is the next technique you have to consider. The best way to perfect a grip is to force yourself to throw a dart a great distance and pay attention to the grip you have to use to achieve a long throw. Take a dart into a large space, preferably outdoors with grass so you do not bend or brake your dart components.

Players I have interviewed come to the agreement that there really is not a proven physical advantage between techniques and they recommend that players just use whatever grip feels the most comfortable to them.

If you are trying to adjust your grip because your throw just does not feel right or your darts are wobbling in the air I recommend you switch darts first. Try variations of barrels, shafts, and flights until you are convinced that the grip is the only excuse left for your concern.

WHY ENTRY ANGLE IS IMPORTANT

THROWING

The throw should be strong enough that the dart travels in a straight line. If you throw it too soft you will see an arch that decreases consistent accuracy. If you throw so hard that the dart makes a loud thump when it hits the board your arm may not be able to keep up for an extended amount of time. You may wake up the next morning with a sore arm and you may not do well if you have to compete again that day.

Line up your elbow at a 45 degree angle. The throw should be similar to the action of a rubber band. Pull back to set your arm in motion, line up your dart just below your eye and then snap forward with a full smooth motion into the release.

THE GRIP

IF YOU DON'T HAVE AN ESTABLISHED GRIP, AND ARE WONDERING WHAT WOULD BE IDEAL FOR YOU—CONDUCT THIS EXPERIMENT!

STEP BACK FROM THE DARTBOARD 20-30 FEET, AND GRIP THE DART IN SUCH A FASHION THAT YOU ARE ABLE TO THROW & HIT THE BOARD FROM THAT DISTANCE.

MORE THAN LIKELY, THE GRIP THAT YOU HAVE MADE WOULD BE THE BEST GRIP ALSO FOR REGULATION DISTANCE.

RELEASE & FOLLOW THROUGH

Your release should be a fluent continuation of your throw. The dart should roll off your thumb. Follow through and swing your arm to meet the hand holding your next dart. You want to try to make the movement as precise as possible, as if you were a machine with no variations. Years of practice with no clutching or jerking in your throw and release is the key to increasing your skill.

STRATEGIES

Now that you have read the history of the sport, studied the rules, chosen all your dart components, prepared to your best ability and practiced your techniques, you are ready to find out how to compete strategically at the highest level.

You will quickly learn that even though a lot of your opponents may have more accuracy during a match, you can still be victorious if you study this chapter closely.

There are many strategy categories: Psychological, mathematical, and physical.

Psychological Strategy

Psychology is a big part of darts. The mind is the foundation of your strategy. Everything builds on the mind like a pyramid. Not only does a sharp, clear, stable, well-rested mind give you the upper hand but the opposite is easy to manipulate to your advantage.

I use a list of IF/THEN examples to help you prepare for your future matches. Study them and be prepared to use them as you would a chess piece.

I F: Your opponent get's upset and unstable easily...

THEN: All you have to do is focus and throw your average. You already have the upper hand. Their focus is weak and after the first couple of solid rounds by you, they begin to give up and their accuracy falters.

I F: Your opponent is getting drunk...

THEN: Joke around with them and follow their lead in conversation. I f you keep them talking you will have won the match before they even start to focus.

I F: Your opponent starts out a match with a cocky attitude...

THEN: Start with a big throw and then either give a little attitude back to get them rattled above their comfort level OR ignore them completely and they will get frustrated that you are un-phased. DO NOT let them think that they have affected you at any point. A good sport would just compliment them on their accomplishment each round with a simple "GOOD DARTS" jester.

I F: Your opponent starts joking around with you...

THEN: Make sure you are prepared to joke back. I f you don't have a reply to their humor they will believe that they have weakened your focus. The ultimate reply to humor is a riddle. Get your opponent confused and thinking about the answer to your riddle and you have backfired their plan.

I F: Your opponent is quiet and focused...

THEN: Try to open a conversation with common openings referring to home location, experience, favorite game etc. Have a buddy near by create secondary conversations around sexual humor and so on that your opponent may over hear in attempt to draw them in.

I F: Your opponent has a companion with them..

THEN: Make flirty jokes and conversation with their companion and they will be paying more attention to the conversation instead of focusing on the match.

I F: Your opponents try any of these tactics on you...

THEN: The best thing to do is have some earphones that you can put on and they will give up trying to distract you.

Mathematic Strategy

Most tournament matches will consist of 501/301 and cricket games. There are odds to consider to finish certain outs.

Some things to consider when playing a players choice match with 301 DI/DO, 501 and Cricket include:

I F: You win the flip...

THEN: GO FIRST!!! Most the time your opponent will pick the game you were considering anyway. Going first always places the pressure on your opponent to match your throw.

I F: You lose the flip...

THEN: Always pick cricket. Even the best players will miss the triples and possibly shoot the wrong ones even if they do hit 3 trips to start. (*See Cricket Strategies)

I F: You are playing a higher average team and win the first game

THEN: (assuming 301 was not played first) play 301 second. I f you miss the 6 dart out you will probably be blocked. You do not want the pressure of advancing to the next round placed on throwing a perfect 301 game so playing it second leaves a lower stress game for third.

I F: You are playing a players choice match AND a game that does not have a scientific advantage of going first such as count up or Bermuda Triangle is an option AND you have the lower average.....

THEN: The odds are in your favor to pick one of these games and go second then to choose to go first and play a game you are an underdog.

01' Open Out Strategy (50 point Bull soft-tip)

I F: You are approaching an out starting at say 340.

THEN: Start with the bull to keep the triple for last. Make sure you go for the 160 score to leave your next throw set up with 180.

I F: You are starting with 181+ ...

THEN: Set up the next throw with a trick. (150) Don't go for a high risk shot by looking at triples.

I F: You are on 160-142..

THEN: Go Bull, Bull, trip. There is no risk of busting. If you go for the trip first and miss you will get upset and not focus as well on the next two throws.

I F: You are on 140-121 in open out...

THEN: Go Bull, Bull. Trip/Double unless the single first leaves you a sure out.

139 for example - 19 first leaves you with a 120 out. Trip 19 leaves you Bull, DB16. Same strategy with 138-130.

129- 19 leaves you bull, trip 20. Trip leaves you Bull, DB. Same with 128-121.

I F: You are on 120-101...

THEN: Go Bull, Single, Bull. This leaves room for error. If you slip a double or trip on your second dart you will still have an out more time then not.

I F: You are on 99-71...

THEN: Go Triple, Single Bull. I f you miss your triple almost any combination will leave you with Bull and then an out.

I F: You are under 70...

THEN: Go Single, Bull. I f you miss the bull you still will have an out most of the time.

01' Open Out Strategy (25 point Bull soft-tip)

I F: You are on 140-121...

THEN: Go Trip, Trip, Single

139- 19 first leaves you with a 120 out. Trip 19 leaves you

Trip 20, DB11. Same strategy with 138-130.

129- 19 leaves you trip 20, DBull. Trip 19 leaves you Trip 19, Single 15. Same with 128-121.

I F: You are on 99-71...

THEN: Go Triple, Single to leave combination of 8 (16,32,48). I f you miss your triple almost any combination will leave you with Single and then an out.

I F: You are under 70...

THEN: Go Triple, Single. If you miss the trip you still will have an out most of the time.

01' Double or Bull Out Strategy (50 point Bull soft-tip)

I F: You are approaching an out starting at say 340.

THEN: Start with the Triple 20 to use gravity to your advantage. Going from a top target down has a higher success rate then starting low and going up. Make sure you go for the 170 score to leave your next throw set up with 170. If you hit the single first then go Bull, Bull.

I F: You are starting with 181+ ...

THEN: Set up the next throw with Bull, Bull, Single to leave 50. Don't go for a high risk shot by looking at triples.

I F: You are on 160-142..

THEN: Go Bull, Trip, Bull. There is no risk of busting.

I F: You are on 140-121...

THEN: Go Bull, Trip, Double/Bull.

139- Bull first leaves you Trip 13, Bull out. Trip 19 leaves you Bull, DB16.

Same strategy with 138-130.

129- 19 leaves you trip 20, Bull. Trip leaves you Bull, Double. Same with 128-121.

I F: You are on 120-101...

THEN: Go Bull, Single, Bull. This leaves room for error. If you slip a double or trip on your second dart you will still have an out more time then not plus you will not bust. Busting may end up blocking your partner in a 4 score game.

I F: You are on 99-71...

THEN: Go Triple, Single Bull. If you miss your triple almost any combination will leave you with Bull and then an out.

I F: You are under 70...

THEN: Go Single, Bull. If you miss the bull you still will have an out most of the time.

I F: You are under 50...

THEN: Leave a combination of (8,16,32)

01' Double Out Strategy (25 point Bull steel-tip)

IF: You are approaching an out starting at say 340.

THEN: Start with the Triple 20 to use gravity to your advantage. Going from a top target down has a higher success rate than starting low and going up. Make sure you go for the 170 score to leave your next throw set up with 170. If you hit the single first then just stay on the 20. Any odd stray needs to be backed by another odd number to set up the doubles.

IF: You are starting with 181+ ...

THEN: Set up the next throw with 2 throws at the 20s and the third at an odd. If you trip the 20 with your first dart then go for a 149 score (T20,T19,D16) to leave 32.

IF: You have 81-90 and only score a single mark with the first dart...

THEN: Throw the second at what ever number will still leave you 50 just in case you only hit a single. (AIM at the trip though!)

For example: You start with 89 and you want T19, D16 but if you get a single 19 (leaving 70) then go for trip 20 that way a single will still leave you a shot at the double bull out.

The rest of the outs don't have much strategic advantage other than just throw what your standard steel dart out chart says.

Cricket Strategies

The game of cricket has a lot of different types of strategy mixed together. Your mathematic strategy will effect your opponents strategy. Mathematic strategy begins the game but soon psychological, physical and chance will all play their role. The following scenarios are based on the opening 2 rounds.

OPENING STRATEGY

Begin by throwing at your strongest number during warm ups. Some days you just warm up and certain numbers feel better then others. Until that changes you better start with the strongest number.

You will have the best results when you throw all three darts at the same target each round unless you are throwing at a target you can not point on. Your goal is to get the dart perfectly placed to guide another dart into the same triple. The best start would be 3 triple 20s.

I F your first dart is blocking the triple then throw at the second strongest number. Your third throw will either be blocked or have room in the same triple as your second dart I F: You miss with the first and second dart....

THEN: Keep your rhythm and continue adjusting your throw towards the same target because you are likely to get closer each additional throw.

UNLESS: A dart is blocking the triple which forces you to aim at the double for a close or pick a new target. There will be very few times during a cricket match that you want to lose your rhythm and I will point them out in this chapter.

I F: Your opponent starts with 3 different triples...

THEN: You need to throw all 3 at the biggest triple left. Going second, you do not have the comfort to pick what number you start with. The largest number needs to be targeted successfully or your odds of being victorious will plummet. You can not follow their lead by closing 3 numbers because it leaves them with the opportunity to close the last three numbers, leaving you only the bull with lower odds of pointing. Even if you hit 6 bulls for 75 points your opponent has a much higher chance of hitting more triples then you have of hitting double bulls through a few rounds of a point battle.

I F: Your opponent throws 9, then 9 again to close out all numbers but you have the point lead with only one zone closed...

THEN: You need to throw 2 at the bull and the third dart each of the following rounds at another number.

I F: Player one closes the bull

THEN: Player two can only close 3 of the 4 remaining zones and hope that player one does not get the point lead on the last throw to win the game.

OPENING 2

I F: Player 1 opens with 3 trips for points (use T20 for example)...

THEN: Player 2 wants to hit 2 trips on the 19 and then trip the 20 leaving player 2 within 2 darts of the point lead and forcing player 1 to close or go all points on a new number. When player 2 hits two T19's and one T20 it only leaves them behind (57-120) and puts pressure on player 1 to close two more zones on round 2 or they will leave player 1 an opportunity to regain control of the game.

I F: Player 1 begins round 2 with two T18's and closes the T19 they will be ahead 174-57. This leaves player 2 with 9 marks on the 17 for a total score of 158.

THEN: Player 1 can follow with T17, T16, T15 leaving player 2 the pressure of hitting 4 bulls just to get the point lead.

OPENING PERFECT BUT LOSING

I F: Player 1 opens with T20, T18, DB

THEN: Player 2 should open T19, T20, T18.

I F: Player 1 hits T19, T16, T15 and surrenders the point lead...

THEN: Player 2 can hit T17, T17, T17 and force player 1 to choose either to hit three T16's to get ahead in points (144-101) or go for the close.

I F: Player 1 closes after hitting two T16's and chooses to remain behind in points, then Player 2 can hit T16, T15, DB to leave Player 1 a lower percentage shot. The first player to hit 3 bulls takes the win and the fact that the Bullseye is smaller than a single numbers pie decreases the chances of hitting three consecutive marks. Less target area equals less room to fit three darts in the mark. One miss by player 1 leaves the winning shot for player 2.

I F: Player 1 throw's 3 T16's instead of closing then player two can keep increasing the lead along with the odds of winning. 152 points over 143 every round. After three rounds of hitting 9 marks player 2 would gain an additional mark on the bull lead. I f player 1 misses any triple and player 2 doesn't then player 2 would be in control of their own destiny.

KEY MOVES

The opening is the foundation of how a cricket game will unfold. A strong opening for player 1 paired with a poor opening by player 2 immediately makes player 2 a massive under-dog. Player 1 attains peak confidence and focus. Player 2 is placed in position for a gut check. I f player 2 does not regroup and throw a near perfect round soon then it will be too late to recover. The key to victory is the middle of the game. This will be where a majority of matches are won or lost. Even if the match starts favoring 1 player through the early rounds, one perfect strategic shot can flip the game completely around. The following scenarios are an example of how to accomplish a momentum shifting shot.

KEY MOVE 1

I F: Player 1 starts with T20, S20, S20...

THEN: Player 2 should take away the 20 to prevent player 1 from running up the point lead. Answer with T20, T19, ?19.

I F: Player 1 continues with T19, T18, T17...

THEN: Player 2 can still attempt to alter player 1's focus by throwing T18, T17, T16. Even though player 2 is behind in points they may succeed in lowering player 1's focus and confidence just enough that player 1 will slip up and leave a momentum shifting shot open.

KEY MOVE 2

I F: Player 1 and player 2 are in a point war between 20s and 19s...

THEN: Player 2 can confuse player 1 by switching the closing order of zones. I like to go from T18 to T15, then T17 just like clock work.

KEY MOVE 3

Open with your strongest number. Great players will make sure they are evenly skilled at all numbers and will not allow their minds to be convinced that any number is weak. If you throw trip 15's like there's no tomorrow then your 135 points is worth more than the 100 on a 5 mark on the 20. Your opponents will be more likely to leave the number alone and try to close a larger number first as well. At least until you throw two 9 marks in a row.

KEY MOVE 4

In games where any double or triple is needed then go for a lower number on the side of the board. The odds of hitting a vertical zone is higher than a horizontal zone due to the fact that the constant margin of error is based on gravity and velocity...not your positioning angle. You can have a weak or strong throw and fall into a neighboring vertical trip or double but with a horizontal zone you will just fall into a single or miss the board.

Physical Strategies

Always begin a match with a high five or fist jester. A hand shake puts your fingers at risk. Or shake with your non throwing hand at least. Some people will try to squeeze your hand extra hard or have sharp jewelry to get one up on you.

Some techniques are considered rude but they can be disguised. Instead of abruptly distracting your opponent you can tell a joke or make a sexual comment. Point out the nearest hottie of opposite sex and ask the opponent for feedback. Less serious players will be distracted by the view for the majority of the match and will not realize why they just lost the match before they knew what hit them.

The best players will take your efforts and simply turn them right back around with their counter strategy.

Let's review! You have now done all the prep work and put in the training for a few years but you probably have not reached the level you know you are capable of.

Speaking from my experience, I started in 1995 as an understudy to a high level English player and my cousin playing in the top local division so I learned proper technique on day one. With proper technique most players should maintain a 2mpr and 22ppd. I averaged around that my first year and increased about .25mpr/3ppd per year after. My averages have remained in the 3.5mpr/33ppd - 4.5mpr/39ppd range since my 4th year playing competitive.

Everyone will have days where the stars align and we shoot above normal but it is when we plateau that we need to ask others to critique and suggest ways to improve. The biggest improvements to my game have come when I increased my dart weight to 19g, extended to a 2 inch barrel, decreased to a half inch L-Style Bullet flight and started keeping a mint in my mouth to prevent me from breathing too fast and rushing my focus. I also find that my accuracy is higher when I warm up with a heavier 22g insert with my VOKS dart when my 19g is feeling a bit heavy. It's funny how a couple of grams can make such a difference.

Maybe these same changes won't improve your game the way they have mine, but it doesn't hurt to try them.

TRAINING IDEAS

Here are the details of my training routines. I do these between 2-4 hours every other day. I do this with 6 darts to maximize the efficiency and increase chances to improve flight angled shots.

Warm up on the bull until you throw 2 hat tricks in a row.

Throw 3 singles at all cricket numbers in order without missing.

Throw 3 singles at all cricket numbers in reverse without missing.

If you miss, you start the next throw on the previous number.

If you miss on the first dart but you land a trip with your 2nd or 3rd dart then you can start the next throw on the same number without going backwards.

If you hit a triple on your first dart and then miss one of the next 2 you can still start on the same number the next throw. If you get discouraged you can stay on the same number until you get 3 singles without dropping back. As you get more demanding of your skills you can raise your mark limits. I do this routine with a 5 mark limit.

501 DO

Throw 3 darts at all doubles you set up. Go in order of biggest to smallest. Don't move on until you hit 2 out of three on each number.

NEXT; Throw triple 20, Double, Double. If you hit 2 out of 3 then move on to the next smallest double you practice.

NEXT; Throw triple, Bull, Double. Then throw bull, triple, bull to stay sharp for those electronic tournaments with 50 point bull out for a double. (ie. FAT Bull)

NEXT; Pick random numbers you see around you and work on those outs. DO each out at least 3 different ways. For example with 100, (trip 20, double 20) then (trip 20, single 20, double 10) then (single 20, trip 20, double 10). Along the way you are bound to hit (triple 5, trip 15, double 20) and (trip 1, trip 19, double 20) or (single 5, trip 15, DB Bull) etc.

Finish with practicing 170 out. Go until you take it out in 6 darts or less.

Player Profiles

I hope to connect companies and organizations who are interested in sponsoring the top dart pros with the options available. When I get approached by a sponsor I ask them what they have in mind and then send their proposal to players who best match up. If you are interested please contact me.

I have included the PDC top 10 to help get American Soft Tip players more acquainted with the Steel Tip elite of the world. The American profiles listed on the next few pages are just a few of the top performers of the new millennium that are waiting for more sponsors so they can afford to play more international tournaments. The 11th Brydens Barbados Darts Festival
2 – 12 November 2013

Presented By Harrows

Open to darts players, both men and women, of all standards and their partners, The Brydens Barbados Darts Festival is a proven winner with participants.

It offers a darts-orientated holiday in one of the most sought-after destinations on the planet.

The itinerary combines both social darts and tournament darts with plenty of money plus a social programme designed to enable you to enjoy all that Barbados is justly famous for.

You will meet darts players from around the globe who share your common love of darts. Previous participants have come from New Zealand, Ireland, USA, Canada, Austria, Spain, Mexico & Tokyo, St Lucia, The Bahamas, Guyana, the Cayman Islands and, of course, Barbados.

The Festival Hotel, Asterior, has become a firm favourite with participants, situated in the popular St Lawrence Gap. It is within walking distance of a variety of bars, restaurants, banks and shops – with a casino, the social darts hub, right across the street. And you will have a magnificent view of the ocean from your room – just yards away!

"Providing the best of Barbados and a great place for people to experience. Come and have a great time at the festival!"
Harrows

The ten night packages start from around £1800 per person (2 sharing room). Further details from Festival Director, Michael Heal:

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Tim "the Rebel" Frentz is a yogi, artist, eco activist, gardener, soccer player, business consultant, fitness trainer, author and dart player.

He recorded his spiritual journey in the new age work "the Helping Hands Yogi" and a comic book series called "the ventures of HELPING HANDS".

Reborn in Grand Island, Nebraska USA in 1977, Frentz graduated from GI Sr. High then remained in Nebraska to attend the University in Lincoln in 1995 where he was introduced to the sport of Darts. Having a family member working in the local strip club allowed him to play his first Masters dart league at only age 18.

In 1997, he suffered major nerve damage to his left limbs after being hit by a car & throwing darts was the perfect physical therapy. Within months his body adapted to the physical needs for the sport and his scoring averages climbed to the national top 5% where he has remained ever since. Frentz travels and places in the top steel and soft tip tournaments regularly.

In 2005, the death of his father inspired Tim to leave home and give himself to causes in urgent need by doing ministry work. He currently competes mostly in dart tournaments that are near the Helping Hands Network's active charity projects.

Frentz's other publications document his college days at the University of Nebraska, visits to spiritual communities, time with various saints, his training of disciple volunteers, building of the Helping Hands Network, his time helping causes in need and his path to becoming a new age yogi.

Frentz continues publishing books & comics, teaching yogi & fitness, and speaks widely in the United States. His organization "The Helping Hands Network" is growing daily in the United States and continues to connect causes in need with thousands of resources through <http://netvibes.com/HelpingHandsNet>
